

TORX head screws resist cam-out better than Phillips or Slotted head screws.

Torx screws are commonly found on automobiles, motorcycles, bicycle brake systems (disc brakes), hard disk drives, computer systems and consumer electronics. Initially, used in applications requiring tamper resistance, since the drive systems and screwdrivers were not widely available; as drivers became more common, tamper-resistant variants were developed.

Torx head sizes are described using the capital letter "T" followed by a number ranging from T1 to T100. Common sizes include T10, T15, & T25, while T35 & T47 are for more specialized use. The same series of Torx drivers is used to drive SAE (Imperial), metric and other thread system fasteners, reducing the number of bit sizes required.

The "EXTERNAL" variants of Torx head sizes are described using the capital letter "E" followed by a number ranging from E4 to E44. The "E" numbers are different from the "T" numbers of the same size. The Table indicates "T" & "E" equivalents.

A Torx successor, Torx Plus, was introduced around 1990. The lobes are more square to allow for higher torque and to minimize wear. The name is shortened to IP (Internal Plus). Please note: Standard Torx drivers can be used to drive Torx Plus screws, (but not to full torque because of the loose fit). Torx Plus drivers will not fit into standard Torx screws.

Internal Torx	External Torx	Point-to-point distance (mm)
T5	E2	1.50
T20	E4	3.95
T25	E5	4.50
T30	E6	5.60
T35	E7	5.90
T40	E8	6.75
T50	E10	8.95
T55	E12	11.35
T60	E16	13.45
T70	E18	15.70
T80	E20	17.75
T100	E24	22.40
